THE FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES OF THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS AND RED CRESCENT MOVEMENT

Humanity

The International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement, born of a desire to bring assistance without discrimination to the wounded on the battlefield, endeavours, in its international and national capacity, to prevent and alleviate human suffering wherever it may be found. Its purpose is to protect life and health and to ensure respect for the human being. It promotes mutual understanding, friendship, cooperation and lasting peace amongst all peoples.

Impartiality

It makes no discrimination as to nationality, race, religious beliefs, class or political opinions. It endeavours to relieve the suffering of individuals, being guided solely by their needs, and to give priority to the most urgent cases of distress.

Neutrality

In order to enjoy the confidence of all, the Movement may not take sides in hostilities or engage at any time in controversies of a political, racial, religious or ideological nature.

Independence

The Movement is independent. The National Societies, while auxiliaries in the humanitarian services of their governments and subject to the laws of their respective countries, must always maintain their autonomy so that they may be able at all times to act in accordance with the principles of the Movement.

Voluntary service

It is a voluntary relief movement not prompted in any manner by desire for gain.

Unity

There can be only one Red Cross or Red Crescent Society in any one country. It must be open to all. It must carry on its humanitarian work throughout its territory.

Universality

The International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement, in which all societies have equal status and share equal responsibilities and duties in helping each other, is worldwide.

People on the move are taking increasingly dangerous routes, both across land and sea. During their journeys, they face significant risks and challenges: many are abused and face exploitation – others face protection risks including child abuse, sexual and gender-based violence and human trafficking. Across all stages of their journeys we are critically concerned about the inability of migrants and displaced people to cover their most essential needs, such as food, water and sanitation, shelter, and healthcare. We are launching this three-year programme across 34 countries in Africa, the Middle East and Europe to scale up and connect humanitarian assistance and protection for more than 2 million people on the move and 500,000 people from host communities.

MIGRANTS

THE CHALLENGE

People on the move - migrants, refugees, asylum seekers and other displaced populations¹ - face extraordinary risks to their lives, safety, dignity, human rights and well-being.

In part this is connected to the core reasons that lead to migration and displacement, ranging from violence, persecution, conflict, poverty, political and social issues, as well as disasters and the adverse effects of climate change. In 2021, we are seeing the compounding factors of the COVID-19 pandemic and the climate crisis driving higher numbers of people to migrate, exacerbating risks and vulnerabilities. A recent IFRC report “Locked down and left out? Why access to basic services for migrants is critical to our COVID-19 response and recovery” has highlighted that “pandemic-related policy measures, including lockdowns and movement restrictions, while aimed at improving public health outcomes, have contributed to migrants’ and refugees’ inability to meet their basic needs and to live in safety and dignity. The most significant impacts include risks to physical health; worsening mental health conditions; severe economic effects – namely an overwhelming level of loss of employment or livelihoods; food insecurity; and challenges in accessing adequate shelter.”

The risks that people on the move face are also connected to increasingly dangerous routes, both across land and sea. In 2021, more than 2,200 people worldwide have lost their lives during dangerous migration journeys.² Many others face abuse, exploitation, and protection risks, including child abuse, sexual and gender-based violence and human trafficking.

However, one of the main concerns for people on the move – and at all stages of their journeys – is the ability to access essential and life-saving assistance and protection.

To address these concerns, the IFRC has recently adopted a ten-year global strategic commitment to scale up support for the most at-risk migrants and displaced people, including through enhancing cross-border and route-based cooperation among National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies along the most dangerous migration routes across the globe.

This new three-year programme focuses on IFRC’s humanitarian assistance to migrants, displaced people and host communities on the migration routes of greatest humanitarian concern spanning Africa, the Middle East and Europe.³

These regions face some of the most complex and critical migration dynamics in the world. Within these dynamics, this three-year plan focuses on the three trans-Mediterranean migration routes, the Atlantic and the Balkans routes. These routes continue to be among the most active and dangerous for people crossing these three regions.

At the operational level, the three-year plan focuses on the critical need for all migrants and displaced people – irrespective of their legal status - to have access to life-saving humanitarian assistance and protection throughout their journeys, both on land and at sea.⁴

² See IOM Missing Migrants Project, which tracks incidents involving migrants, including refugees and asylum-seekers, who have died or gone missing while migrating across borders: <https://missingmigrants.iom.int>.

³ The IFRC is also concerned by critical migration and displacement challenges in regions outside of Africa, the Middle East and Europe and this programme can be read as complementary to regional approaches being developed and implemented in the Americas and Asia Pacific.

A living document

This programme initially centres on support to people on the move and host communities in 34 countries in Africa, the Middle East and Europe. However, this programme is designed to be scaled up and extended as needs evolve and humanitarian crises develop for people on the move. It is anticipated, for example, that humanitarian assistance and protection for people on the move connected to the crisis in Afghanistan would also be added to the case for support. This support will be in line with the principled humanitarian approach of the IFRC and National Societies, as outlined in the case for support.

IFRC approach to migration and displacement

As a global humanitarian network with a permanent presence in 192 countries, the IFRC approaches migration from a purely humanitarian perspective. The IFRC focuses on the needs, vulnerabilities and potential of migrants, irrespective of their legal status, type, or category. The “deliberately broad” approach of the IFRC includes refugees, asylum seekers, labour migrants, stateless migrants, and migrants deemed irregular by public authorities.

This approach is complemented by the Movement’s 2009 Policy on Internal Displacement, which reaffirms the longstanding commitment and practice of addressing the needs of individuals and communities affected by internal displacement.

Every day for the past year she has waited at the roadside where refugees and migrants are taken off buses about 100 km from the nearest refugee reception centres in Bihac. Sanela does her best to comfort them and provide blankets, food and basic first aid - she has helped 6,000 people at this roadside.

Humanitarian Service Points

A Humanitarian Service Point (HSP) is a neutral space operated by the IFRC along migratory routes. The objective of HSPs is to contribute to the safety, dignity and protection of vulnerable migrants by providing essential assistance and protection services. HSPs can be mobile or fixed – and are welcoming and safe environments for people on the move throughout their journeys – irrespective of their status – and without fear of being arrested or reported to authorities.

There is no one-size-fits-all model of operation: in certain locations HSPs may simply provide critical information through trusted channels and preferred languages; in others healthcare, food and non-food items might be provided. The services provided depend on the needs of people on the move and the resources and capacity of the National Society.

PROPOSED SOLUTION

This programme brings together the humanitarian operations of 34 National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, with projected support to 2,045,000 migrants and displaced people and 506,000 individuals from host communities.

The humanitarian operations of the 34 National Societies will be closely supported by the IFRC and Partner National Societies.

This document provides an overview at the global and regional levels of the three-year route-based programme across Africa (including 14 National Societies); the Middle East (including 7 National Societies) and Europe (including 13 National Societies). It also provides an overview of the programme's approach to assistance and protection at sea.

This document can be read alongside more detailed country-level plans for each of the 34 National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies.

Across the three regions, the core elements of the three-year route-based programme include:

1. Humanitarian assistance, protection and social cohesion

- The needs of the most vulnerable people on the move will be addressed through direct assistance and protection, including safe referrals, by National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies.
 - Humanitarian assistance will include food and non-food items, emergency shelter, water and sanitation, health, psychosocial support and support in restoring family links (RFL).
 - Protection will include specialized referrals, including mental health, child protection, prevention of sexual and gender-based violence and anti-trafficking, and support in restoring family links (RFL).
 - Social cohesion between people on the move and host communities will be enhanced through National Society initiatives focused on reducing stigma, discrimination, and xenophobia.
 - In certain contexts people on the move and host communities will be supported to enhance livelihoods, community-based resilience and economic and social reintegration, through the support of National Societies.
- All support for migrants, displaced people and host communities will be informed by the direct experience and views of communities themselves, including through community engagement and accountability (CEA) approaches, ensuring that trust with people on the move and host communities is built and maintained.
- All support for migrants, displaced and host communities will follow a protection gender and inclusion (PGI) approach, including a focus on “do no harm”.
- A key way that people on the move and host communities will receive assistance and protection is through Humanitarian Service Points \(HSPs\) (see text box) – which will be positioned at key points along these migratory routes.

2. Humanitarian assistance and protection at sea

- People on the move will receive assistance and protection from the IFRC, in partnership with SOS MEDITERRANEE, on board the Ocean Viking operating on the central Mediterranean route.
 - Humanitarian assistance will include first aid, health, maternal healthcare, food and non-food items and psychosocial support.
 - Protection will include a focus on “do no harm”, case management, support in restoring family links (RFL), safe referrals and provision of critical information.

3. Support to host communities along migration routes

- The most at-risk host communities will be supported through humanitarian assistance and protection, and social cohesion initiatives.
- In certain contexts, host communities will be supported with livelihoods initiatives.

4. Evidence-based programming and humanitarian diplomacy

- Data collection and analysis will be strengthened – including based on migrant and host community feedback – to inform and adjust assistance and protection services based on changing dynamics and local priorities.
- Humanitarian diplomacy in favour of the most at-risk people on the move will be enhanced through strengthened data collection.
- Research by the Red Cross and Red Crescent Global Migration Lab⁵ will generate insights into migration trends, policies and good practices to better inform and adjust humanitarian assistance and protection for people on the move across the three regions.

5. Enhanced local, national and regional capacities

- Migrants, displaced people and host communities will receive more effective assistance and protection, based on a strengthened cross-border and route-based cooperation among National Societies. This focus on route-based cooperation will enable more holistic, predictable and adaptable assistance and protection for the evolving needs of people on the move.
- This cooperation will also build the capacity of National Societies as local actors across borders and along routes (in countries of origin, transit and destination); this will include information exchange; shared analysis; lessons learned and good practices; community insights and feedback; information on available services; possible alerts on new migration dynamics; mapping of Red Cross Red Crescent local branches along migratory routes; establishing cross-border referral mechanisms with due consideration to data protection and confidentiality concerns; and engaging in joint advocacy strategies.
- Within the IFRC network, peer-to-peer support will be strengthened and will build on the wealth of lessons learned and best practices from regional National Society networks such as the Asia-Pacific Migration Network (APMN), the MENA Migration Network, Sahel+, the Platform for European Red Cross Cooperation on Refugees, Asylum Seekers and Migrants (PERCO) and the European Red Cross Action for Trafficked Persons Network (ATN).

6. Strengthened coordination mechanisms

- This programme will focus on enabling more efficient coordination and engagement between National Societies and local and national authorities, as well as with external partners with a view to filling gaps and avoiding duplication of efforts.
- National Societies across the three regions will leverage their auxiliary role to facilitate close coordination with authorities and other key partners by sharing analysis and deepening engagement and advocacy. The programme will also include a focus on strengthening strategic dialogue and programmatic partnerships with key migration actors to increase reach and impact.

⁵ The Global Migration Lab is a new initiative currently hosted by Australian Red Cross. The Lab seeks to ensure that the voices, expertise and experience of migrants and the communities in which they live and work are amplified to guide and inform policy and operations, and that research on migration builds on evidence from people directly affected. Projects aim to provide partners, governments and the Red Cross Red Crescent Movement with recommendations and insights to influence the structural factors that given rise to vulnerabilities experienced by migrant groups across the world. IFRC NETWORK'S VALUE PROPOSITION

The worldwide operational network and permanent local presence along migratory routes in countries of origin, transit and destination.

The long-standing commitment and experience in providing assistance and protection to people on the move, irrespective of their legal status, and along migratory routes, allowing for a more holistic, integrated and comprehensive response to needs.

The unique role of National Societies as partner of choice for governments, humanitarian and development organizations and donors. As auxiliaries to their public authorities, National Societies are well-positioned to facilitate cooperation within borders and through the IFRC network along migratory routes, in particular through the collection and dissemination of information. This privileged position also enables humanitarian diplomacy with and on behalf of people on the move as well as in favour of policies that support social inclusion and non-discrimination.

The combination of direct operational experience at the local level with a global reach and knowledge that enables the transfer and sharing of best practices, insights and guidance.

The cross-sectoral nature of the approach of National Societies is well aligned with a holistic route-based approach addressing the myriad of needs of vulnerable people on the move, irrespective of their legal status or category.

The trusted volunteer network remains a hallmark of National Societies and their unhindered access to communities ensures that the needs of the most vulnerable are identified and addressed, and that community-led approaches underpin programmes.

Situational analysis

The Africa region is marked by four main northward migration routes. The Atlantic route going towards the Canary Islands, with people on the move often leaving the coasts of Gambia, Senegal and Mauritania. The Western Mediterranean route, going from Mali and Algeria, or along the coast from Morocco to Spain. The Central Mediterranean route to Libya, traversing Mali, Burkina Faso and Niger towards Libya to Italy. The Eastern route, passing through Sudan and going towards Egypt and Libya (and to Italy, Greece, Cyprus and Bulgaria).

The routes that people on the move embark on in Africa are increasingly dangerous. The Sahel is marked by violence, increasingly scarce resources impacted by climate change, food insecurity and extreme poverty. Violence continues to spread in the region, increasing eightfold from 2015 to 2020 leading to the fastest growing internal displaced crisis in the world, with 5.4 million people displaced (UNOCHA, 2021). Eastern Africa is marked by increasing food insecurity, high inflation and continued conflict. The region is already host to one of the largest internally displaced persons (8.7 million) and refugee (4.75 million) populations in the world (UNHCR, 2021). Following the crisis in Ethiopia it is estimated that more than 2 million people have been displaced, this is compounded by rising concerns of food insecurity as conflict led to a lost harvest season in the northern part of the country.

Proposed activities

The IFRC route-based programme will be implemented by 14 National Societies in West and Central Africa, East Africa and the Sahel regions.

The route-based programme in the Africa region will ensure that humanitarian services are available at key locations along migratory routes; facilitating people on the move's access to services in a safe and dignified way across countries and regions; facilitating coordination and information sharing between partners across countries and regions; adapting services to follow changing migration routes and to strengthen quality of services based on feedback; and providing a harmonized approach to humanitarian services for people on the move.

Situational analysis

People on the move arrive in Europe through different land and maritime routes, including the three-trans-Mediterranean (Eastern, Central and Western Mediterranean), Atlantic and Balkan routes. COVID-19-related border closures have had discernible impact on migration routes – with a notable decrease in arrivals through the Eastern Mediterranean route (-75%), whereas the Balkans route (+105%) and the Central Mediterranean routes (+155%) have seen significant increases in the past year (ICMPD, 2021). The Atlantic route has also witnessed a 900% increase in comparison to 2019 (ICPMD, 2021). Preliminary analysis indicates that the medium- and long-term socio-economic impacts of the pandemic will continue to influence migration. It should equally be noted the combination of conflict, political instability and economic insecurity in regions outside of Europe will continue to influence both migratory routes and trends.

For those arriving in Europe, needs continue to be significant while capacities to address those needs may also be limited, including due to the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic and overstretched national capacities in certain contexts. People on the move arriving in Europe often require access to essential services, including food, Household Items (HHIs), shelter, education, livelihoods, RFL, health and psycho-social support as well as protection. Within the context of the pandemic, they have also faced border closures, delayed access to asylum procedures and disruption in health and protection services.

Proposed activities

The IFRC route-based programme will be implemented by 13 National Societies in the Europe region. National Societies in Europe have extensive experience in assisting and protection people on the move. This route-based programme will support a scale-up of existing activities and will facilitate enhanced cross regional coordination. This will also enable for tools and lessons learned to be adapted to local contexts for National Societies in other regions, including through peer exchange.

The following provides a snapshot of activities that will be prioritized based on the most pressing need of people on the move across the region.

ASSISTANCE AND PROTECTION AT SEA (PARTNERSHIP WITH SOS MEDITERRANEE)

Since 2014, the Central Mediterranean has even become the world's deadliest migratory sea route with over 35,000 lives lost in the past seven years (IOM, 2021).

In 2020, 1024 people lost their lives on the Central Mediterranean route and in the first six months of 2021 that figures stands at 677 lives lost (IOM, 2021). The actual number of fatalities recorded on the migratory routes is very likely to be higher due to unreported and "invisible" shipwrecks.

Proposed activities

The IFRC, in partnering with SOS MEDITERRANEE, seeks to extend its humanitarian assistance and protection to people on the move at sea. This partnership will combine SOS MEDITERRANEE's sea rescue expertise with the assistance and protection expertise of the IFRC network. The objective of the operation is to reduce human suffering and prevent the loss of life through a fully able-to-assist rescue ship in the Central Mediterranean.

The IFRC will provide post-rescue services through the implementation of Humanitarian Service Points at sea, further augmenting the IFRC's network presence along land and maritime migratory routes.

The main activities of the IFRC will include the provision of essential services, such as first aid, emergency healthcare, maternal healthcare, food, essential household items (e.g., dry clothes, blankets and toiletries), water and sanitation (WASH), protection, gender and inclusion (PGI), psychological support, and support in Restoring Family Links (RFL). PGI will also be mainstreamed for its safeguarding and mitigation and response standards throughout all activities post rescue. Community Engagement and Accountability (CEA) activities and approaches will be integrated in the response. This means that post rescue efforts will ensure information and assistance regarding next steps after disembarkation is provided in line with the coordinated efforts by the IFRC on shore, so that safe referrals and assistance on land is as relevant, timely and appropriate as possible.

On 19 June 2021, the IFRC launched an Emergency Appeal seeking a total of 2 million Swiss francs to provide humanitarian services for an initial period of 3 months. The Emergency Appeal is available on the IFRC website.

Situational analysis

The Middle East and North Africa (MENA) is a region with over 400 million people facing some of the world's longest and worst protracted crises. The region has had to contend with multiple and complex humanitarian challenges due to man-made and natural threats. The needs of affected populations are increasing in scale and exacerbated by violence, economic, political and social crises, disasters and the COVID-19 pandemic. The pandemic, which has stretched the capacities of public authorities and National Societies ability to respond is also taking a heavy toll on the population of the region, aggravating existing humanitarian challenges, including increasing displacement.

The MENA region continues to concurrently represent countries of origin, transit and destination along migration routes, with three interlinked dynamics at play: forced migration and internal displaced largely due to protracted crises across the region; irregular migration flow driven by economic factors; movement of regular and irregular labour migrants. There are more than 56 million people in need, 40 million migrants and 14.3 million internally displaced persons in the region.

Proposed activities

The IFRC multi-year route-based programme will be implemented by seven National Societies in the MENA region. The National Societies within the region have extensive experience in implementing migration and displacement programming. The majority of existing programming focuses on access to health care through community-based health and first aid programmes; livelihoods and cash programming; protection activities focused on the specific risks faced by children and women; support at disembarkation points; food security; mental health and psychosocial support services; and programmes aimed at enhancing social cohesion.

The following provides a snapshot of activities that will be prioritized based on the most pressing need of people on the move across the region.

CROSS-REGIONAL RESOURCE REQUIREMENTS

In order to fully operationalize the cross-regional, multi-year route-based programme and to achieve the goals set across the three regions a global envelope of CHF 58 million per year for 2021-2024 will be required.

This includes (as detailed above):

Africa region	16.73 m
Europe region	27.8 m
Assistance and protection at sea	5.9 m
Middle East and North Africa	7.3 m
Global coordination and management	250 k
TOTAL	58 m

This will support the three-year route-based programme to reach more than 2,045,000 people on the move and 506,000 people from host communities per year across 34 countries in three regions.
